FROM JULY 19. TO JULY 26. 1739.

Continuation of Dr. Tennent's MEMORIAL, begun in our laſt.

AND further, it is to be obſerved, That Iron Oar, Silver, Copper, Marble, Water, and in ſhort every thing to be found in the Globe of our Earth, are more aſſembled together than ſeparated from one another, which evidently proves that there is ſuch a Law impreſs'd on Matter as to attract that which is ſimilar to itſelf, by which many Phenomena in Nature are to be ſolved.

But to illuſtrate this Matter more to the Point of the Subject, Water will freeze much ſooner after it has been boiled than before; which may be known thus: Put equal Quantities of cold Water in two Veſſels of the ſame kind and ſize, firſt boiling that to be put in one of the Veſſels over a briſk Fire for about a quarter of an Hour; then expoſe both for ſome Time to the froſty Air, when it will appear that the boiled Water will freeze much ſooner than the other: Which Phenomenon is explicable by what is before proved of the Neceſſity of a Diſſolution previous to the Coagulation of a Fluid; for the Ebulition or violent Agitation of its Particles over the Fire induceth a Diſſolution thereof, and being in that State, the ſimilar Particles, or thoſe neceſſary to a Coagulation, ſooner meet, combine, and connect, or elſe their Modification requiſite for a Coagulum is effected by a Diſſolution.

And ſtill more near to the Point, Dr. Mead in his Eſſay on Poiſons tells us, That the immediate Effect of the Viper Venom in the Caſe of a Patient bit by that Creature, is a Diſſolution of the Blood, and recommends the volatile Salt of Vipers for the Cure, ſays that nothing exceeds it in quickening the Circle of the Blood, and gives an Inſtance of its Succeſs in a Caſe where the Miſchief had gone ſo far as to induce an univerſal Ictenus; by which it is plain, that the Blood is coagulated by its Diſſolution, for if it was not, any ſubtile penetrating Medicine, ſuch as the volatile Salt of Vipers, muſt increaſe the Diſſolution by quickening the Circle of the Blood, and therefore would be the contrary of a Remedy, were it not eſſential to the Patient's Recovery, that the ſolid Part of the Blood, which is coagulated, in conſequence of the Diſſolution of the more looſe Part, be attenuated and diſſolved. Now, as it is known from Experience, that volatile Salts, ſuch as that of Harts Horn and Sal ammoniac, have the ſame kind of Effect upon the Blood as the volatile Salt of Vipers, only in a leſs Degree, and that all three have good Effects in Pleuriſies and Peripneumonies; and ſince it is alſo known, that the Venom of the Rattleſnake and Viper are the ſame in Quality, the Venom of the former having a greater Degree of Virulence than the latter; the Conſequence therefore is clear, that whatever will anſwer a Patient's Cure after the Rattleſnake's Bite, muſt do the ſame in thoſe Caſes wherein the volatile Salt of Vipers is ſucceſsful; for one Medicine producing like Effects in two Caſes, proves ſome Analogy between them; for if there was none, the Effects would be quite different.

From the foregoing remote and more near Reaſoning in order to advance the Diſcovery of the Seneka Indians for curing the unlucky Patient bit by a Rattleſnake, for the Good of Mankind and Honour of the Memorialiſt's Profeſſion; he thought himſelf juſtifiable in putting the Medicine to a Tryal, and accordingly did: The Succeſs of which, having fully anſwered his Expectation, ſhall give the Method of adminiſtring it in ſuch Manner as he thinks will be eaſily underſtood.

Firſt when the Patient is taken, let ten Ounces of Blood be drawn from the Arm of the Side oppoſite to that affected with Diſeaſe, and preſently after give three Spoonfuls of the Decoction of Rattleſnake Root, which muſt be repeated every ſix Hours, till the Symptoms abate in a great Degree. But if they ſhould return notwithſtanding, which happens ſometimes, Bleeding is to be repeated in the ſame Quantity as the firſt time, and ſo in like Manner a third, fourth, or fifth time, or oftener; tho' it ſeldom happens that it is wanted above twice; which Method anſwers for the Cure of a Pleuriſy, generally ſpeaking: But in particular Caſes, where the Patient has a Purging attending the Diſorder, give twenty Grains of the Root every three Hours, with ten Grains of Cinnamon poudered, and as much prepared Harts Horn, obſerving alſo to let Blood as often as the Symptoms recur; by which is meant the Pain, Fever, Cough, and Difficulty in breathing.

When the Breaſt is only affected with the Pain, or both Sides and the Breaſt affected at once, the ſame Method is to be followed as when one Side only is affected, the Diſeaſe being the ſame notwithſtanding of that Difference in the Symptoms.

For ordinary Drink, give Hyſop Decoction, or a Tea drawn from Marſh Mallard Roots, ſweetned with Honey; but in caſe of a Purging attending the Caſe, let the Drink be ſweetned with double refined Sugar, and the Cinnamon and Harts Horn before preſcribed are to be given with the poudered Rattleſnake Root in a little of it; and it is to be obſerved, that both the Decoction of the Root and Tea are given warm.

If the Patient be troubled with a Vomiting, or Nauſea, give one ſpoonful and half of the Decoction every three Hours, or if that ſhould immediately be thrown up, give half a ſpoonful of the Decoction every Hour; obſerving in ſuch a Caſe to bleed, as before adviſed.

There is a Diſeaſe called a Pleuriſy, wherein Bleeding is of ill Conſequence, which may with great Propriety be called a latent or ſpurious Peripneumony; yet the above Method with the Decoction of the Root, is a very certain one, giving inſtead of pectoral Teas, a Tea made of Thyme or Marjoram, or rather Rum-punch. This Diſeaſe perſonates a Pleuriſy, or Peripneumony, to a ſuperficial Obſerver, the Symptoms being the ſame, only with this Difference, That the Pulſe is always low, which in an inflamatory Pleuriſy or Peripneumony is ſo only upon the firſt Invaſion, or when the Diſeaſe is upon terminating in Death: But it is to be noted for a Mark of this latent Peripneumony, that on its firſt Approach the Patient is cold, convulſed, and very much inclined to ſleep, and alſo that it attacks in the Autumn after exceſſive hot Summers attended with much Rain; and towards February, or ſooner if the Winter ſets in very cold, tranſlates to an inflamatory Pleuriſy or Peripneumony.

The Operation of this Root is different according to the Circumſtances of the Conſtitution and Diſeaſe; ſometimes, it is by Vomit, at other times by Sweat, Urine and Stool, and in ſome Caſes, ſuch as a latent Peripneumony, it has none of theſe Operations tions in any Degree; yet the Patient is ſurprizingly recovered, which ſhews that it ſtrongly attenuates the Blood.

The Succeſs of the aforeſaid Method is proved from Experience to be ſo great, that an intermitting Fever is not carried off with more Certainty with Jeſuits Bark, than a Pleuriſy or Peripneumony with the Seneka Rattleſnake Root. And with great Truth the Memorialiſt affirms, That the Cure often is effected the third Day if the Method be followed up from the firſt Attack of the Diſtemper, and alſo that the Patient will find great Relief in the ſpace of an Hour after the Decoction; tho' every one may not, yet it has that Effect very often: And he further aſſerts, That whether the Diſeaſe be in the Beginning, Increaſe, or State, the Medicine has like Effects, and anſwers to perfection the Deſign of all the Methods preſcribed by Authors of the beſt note for theſe different Stages.

However oppoſite to Truth this may ſeem to ſome, it ought to be conſidered, that, tho' Experience hitherto made it appear that a different Method was neceſſary in the ſeveral Stages of a Pleuriſy or Peripneumony; yet it could not poſitively be from thence inferred, that it was impoſſible that one Method was ſufficient; for there are no Demonſtrations in Phyſick certain, only a poſteriori; and tho' indeed it was demonſtrated that no one Method known was ſufficient for that Purpoſe, yet it never appeared impoſſible, or at leaſt it ſhould not, to an unprejudiced Enquirer, that ſuch a thing might be found out.

This Root promiſes to be of very extenſive Uſe both from ſound Philoſophy and Matters of Fact: For the Memorialiſt appeals to what is deem'd ſound Philoſophy as the Teſt of his aforeſaid Arguments, and indeed to Reaſon itſelf, which, being ſupported by Experience, will, he preſumes, lead every honeſt diſcerning Man into his Opinion. There are many Inſtances of Quartan Agues, Dropſies, ſuch as are called an Anaſarca, cured by this Root, and of the Gout relieved more than from any thing elſe: But it is Time and Experience that will ſhew the ſeveral Effects of it; and therefore he declines ſaying any thing as to theſe things, till more numerous Inſtances prove it, which will require a conſiderable Time, theſe Diſorders not occurring ſo often as a Pleuriſy or Peripneumony, which are mortal, and for that Reaſon have haſtned a greater Number to try the Efficacy of the Seneka Rattleſnake Root.

[The Remainder in our next]

LONDON, April 6.

Conformable to what has been lately remark'd, in reſpect to the Situation of Affairs in Sweden, the laſt Letters from Stockholm relate, That there is yet but little likelihood of the Separation of the States of that Kingdom. Two Subjects equally important take up the greateſt Part of their Time: The firſt of which is, an Enquiry into the Peace of Neuſtad, and into the late Renewal of that Treaty; and the ſecond is, upon the Meaſures that are to be purſued for naming a Succeſſor to the Crown. The former of theſe Enquiries was the Cauſe of the five Senators being diſmiſs'd. Count de Horn had certainly undergone the ſame Fate, if he had not foreſeen the approaching Storm, and prevented its falling upon him by a voluntary Reſignation. It has been diſcovered that theſe Senators, who were named Commiſſiaries for renewing the Treaty with Ruſſia, had been by dint of Money engaged in the Intereſt of that Power; and ſome People pretend to be ſo much in the Secret of this Affair, as to ſay, they know the very Sums that were given them. The Deliberating upon the Nomination of a Succeſſor the Crown, ſeems at this time to be the more neceſſary, as the King's ill State of Health does not permit him to intermeddle in the Buſineſs of the Government; it being very certain, whatever may have been ſaid to the contrary, that the King has not retaken upon him the Regency of the Kingdom with which the Queen was inveſted; and that in all Probability, he never will be in a Condition to do ſo. It is now more poſitively than ever aſſur'd, that this Prince will next Summer go to Caſſel, particularly if ſome extremely rugged Subjects, which have been under Deliberation, ſhould paſs into a definitive Reſolution. The Duke of Holſtein's Party has conſiderably ſtrengthen'd itſelf, and to all Appearance has got the Superiority. It's not queſtion'd but Sweden will uſe its utmoſt Efforts to regain the Provinces, which it was obliged to yield to Ruſſia by the Treaty of Neuſtad. The preſent Time and Circumſtances ſeem very proper for effecting the Deſign. The Baron de Sinclaire, who is now actually at Conſtantinople, is, it's ſaid, charged with Propoſitions relating to this Affair. We are poſitively aſſur'd, that the Intrigues of the Court of Ruſſia with the Members of the Senate were diſcover'd by the Miniſter of France. The French Nation in this Inſtance of inſtigating a powerful Enemy to fall upon, and take Advantages of the Emperor's beſt Ally, and only Support againſt the common Enemy of Chriſtendom, ſhews him how much ſhe has his Intereſt at Heart, and what great Things are to be expected from her Meditation at Conſtantinople.

Extract of a Letter from Madrid, April 11.

" Mr. Keene, the Britiſh Miniſter Plenipoteniary, had another Conference three Days ago with the Marquiſs de Villarias, who declared to his Excellency that the King would not deſiſt from any of the Conditions ſtipulated in the laſt Convention; that his Majeſty being reſolved to execute punctually what he promis'd, he hoped to be uſed in the ſame manner; that it was upon that Footing his Commiſſaries ſhould open the Conferences with thoſe of his Britannick Majeſty; but that the Aſſiento Treaty ſhould be quite out of the Queſtion, ſince the South Sea Company refuſe to pay 68,000 l, Sterling, which they owe to the King, though the Payment of that Sum was ſtipulated in the Declaration given a few Days before the Convention was ſigned.

They write from Belgrade, that they have not only received a Confirmation of the Grand Vizir's being depos'd, but that he has been ſtrangled, and all his Eſtate and Effects confiſcated; and that Baſhaw Bonneval, who was diſgrac'd meerly becauſe he would not blindly approve all the Meaſures of that Prime Miniſter, has been recalled from his Exile.

The Command of the Portland Man of War being given to Capt. Bing, he is preparing to carry over his Brother to the Government of Barbadoes, where the ſaid Ship is to be ſtation'd for three Years.

May 10. Yeſterday about Eight in the Morning the Right Hon. the Earl of Hallifax departed this Life, at his Houſe in the New-Palace-Yard, Weſtminiſter.

May 12. They write from Paris, that a Copy of a Letter from a Spaniſh General Officer is handed about there, wherein he expreſſes himſelf to the following Purpoſe, Our Forces were never in a better Condition than at preſent; we have actually on Foot an Army of 155,000 Men, and a good Number of Men of War well arm'd; his Majeſty has removed ſeveral eſſential Difficulties by acceding to the Treaty of Vienna, ſo that we may promiſe ourſelves Succeſs, in caſe any important Enterprize is taken in hand.

The General Dyet of Sweden broke up the 18th of laſt Month but it is thought that the ſecret Committee will ſit untill the End of this Month. Recruits are raiſing all over Sweden, and Orders have been iſſued to do the ſame at Stralſund, and in Swediſh Pomerania, the Government deſigning to have 80,000 Men on Foot; they have alſo taken Meaſures for fitting out 40 Men of War, and the Number of their Seamen actually amounts to upwards of 20,000. Count Gyllembourg ſeems to have a great hand in the Affairs at preſent on the Tapis at Stockholm.

We hear that ſeveral French Men of War have ſailed, ſince Saturday laſt from Breſt for the Baltick.

We hear that Orders are ſent to ſome Men of War in the Weſtern Ports to repair to the Downs, which Place is appointed for the Rendezvous of the Ships intended as a Squadron of Obſervation.

On the Death of the late celebrated Mrs. Rowe.

COME all ye fair, in ſable Weeds appear,
For all your Sexes Pride lies buried here.
Here all ye Graces, all ye Virtues come,
And watch and weep round Philomela's Tomb.
Ye Muſes, here your ſacred Sorrows ſhed,
You lov'd her living, and ſhould mourn her dead:
With Myrtle, and with Bayes adorn her Herſe,
And ſing her Praiſe in never dying Verſe.
Or bid your Watts again reſume the Lyre
And fill his Soúl with more than mortal Fire.
---- Ah no! ſhe ſcorn'd from others to receive,
That Immortality ſhe beſt could give.
Then reſt dear Shade, ſecure of deathleſs Fame,
Time cannot blaſt your Verſe, nor Envy blame.

Mr. Franklin,

The following is a Paragraph contain'd in a Letter I received lately from my Brother Thomas Bond, in Paris, dated Feb. 20. 1738,9: As I think it will in no small Measure confirm the Character of the Seneca Snake-Root, set forth by Dr. Tennent, common Justice to that Gentleman obliges me to make it known to the Publick. PHINEAS BOND.

" The Seneca Snake-Root, was sent from Virginia to Mr. " Jussieu, Physician and Professor of Botany to the King, with " a Recommendation and the Method of Use in a Pleurisy, and " has been frequently tried by him and many others in that Dis- " order with surprizing Success, and is in great Esteem: He is a " Man of great Reputation and Learning, and told me this him- " self.
